15. Multidisciplinary / interdisciplinary

The changing scenario of engineering and technology expects students to have a knowledge of a variety of disciplines. The Institute has since long recognized this need and has introduced a number of courses of interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary nature. With the advent of growth in areas of robotics and automation, the institute conducts two courses of around 50 hours each approximately. Students learn basic ideas from mechanical engineering, materials engineering, embedded systems, mathematics for guidance and navigation systems for the robots. They actually build the robots. This exposure also helps the students in successful participation in various national and international robotics events The students also learn mobile app development. This provides a creative opening for their Ap development ideas. Students also develop codes in programming languages and learn to interface hardware with software. Drone development, computer vision based applications are developed from these academic opportunities. Besides the exposure to robotics and programming and allied interfaces, the students learn the basic concepts of Internet of Things, which helps them develop smart systems on integrated platforms using various bus protocols, networking and embedded system ideas Students are also made aware of domain of Data Science in which they are given knowledge about various statistical programming platforms such as R, and also fundamental ideas of descriptive and inferential statistics are taught and are applied on data bases for realization of Data Science principles. The working knowledge of Data base management is also vital, which is shared with them in a theory course supplemented with practicals. Another emerging area that is captured is 3-D printing and manufacturing. The basic ideas of this vital area are also covered. Besides these, students perform Engineering Design and Innovation projects, where there is a distinct emphasis on using the multidisciplinary approach. These projects have also resulted in innovative outcomes, research publications, patents, prototype product developments etc.

16.Academic bank of credits (ABC):

The Institute has not registered for the Academic Bank of credits in Academic Year 2022-23..

17.Skill development:

The curriculum and assessment patterns in the Institute are specifically aimed at honing and nurturing diverse skills of the students. Upto date technical knowledge: The curriculum is updated dynamically to meet the changing demands of the industry and society at large. The technology changes at a rapid pace. Besides the faculty the involvement of other stakeholders such as industry , alumni, parents, government also ensure that content provided to the students is up to date. The faculty training and development practices also ensures that the faculty have been made aware of the technological developments and have grasped the contents, and are poised to deliver them in a pedagogically conducive student friendly manner. The hardware, software and other laboratory support is given from time to time, to help the students realise the emerging ideas. Various hackathons, students contests and events provide the right opportunity for the students to showcase their acquired abilities. Students' seminars and group discussions activities provide an assessment centric platform for validation of such skills. Communication: besides the technical knowhow, as a successful engineer, it becomes very essential to convey the ideas to various diverse audience from time to time. An engineer essentially works at an interface between the technocrats on one side and common nontechnical, unskilled yet equally valuable members of the society on the other side. Hence communication skills of the Engineer are as vital as the technical skills. Group discussions and group presentations are a vital assessment component using which help in enhancing communication skills. Leadership: The leadership skill is also vital for the success in professional and personal life. Many situations arise when these skills are tested and being a mere technocrat is never sufficient. Hence with the hep of various presentations, course projects, assignments, student activities, speeches on platforms , these skills are nurtured. Interpersonal: Various group activities and assessments mentioned above, provide another rightful opportunity to the young engineers to hone these equally vital skills. The interpersonal skills help the students to be a good team member, a dedicated and reliable follower as well as a leader at times. Creativity: Creative solutions form scientists and technocrats have made the world as advanced and as developed as we experience today. For every course, a Course project is to be made, which is an open ended assessment that allows the students to provide a creative solution for a technical problem. Also Hackathon, is a platform that allows students to showcase their creative talent.

2.3 - Teaching- Learning Process

2.3.1 - Student centric methods, such as experiential learning, participative learning and problem solving methodologies are used for enhancing learning experiences

The goal of academic processes is to spread the learning and outcomes of a course. The planning, delivery, and assessment of academic processes that are centred on the student are meant to help students learn. The goal is to improve three skills that are needed for professional growth: cognitive, psychomotor, and affective skills. Teachers try to make their classes as interactive as possible and encourage students to come up with new ideas. Teachers use things like Powerpoint presentations, audiovisual methods, Google classroom, projects, industrial visits, field work-based analysis, and surveys to help students learn more. Teachers also give out assignments and have group discussions in ways that encourage students to learn by doing. Some of the courses also have papers that are meant to teach students how to do research. Internships , industrial visit, participation in technical events, and projects works give students work experience and help them get excited about their future careers. They learn professional skills, how to work as a team, how to communicate, and other skills that helps them get jobs.

Bansal Institute of Science and Tcehnology has undergone a transformative shift in education through Information and Communication Technology (ICT). Serving as a Nodal Center for Virtual Labs in collaboration with IIT Delhi, the integration of a comprehensive Learning Management System provides students and teachers with a versatile set of tools, including web-resources, video-lectures, animated demonstrations, and self-evaluation.

The implementation of "flipped classrooms" using the Canvas Learning Management System is noteworthy, allowing students to access course materials before class. The E-Learning Studio, equipped with a Samsung flipped Board, facilitates the recording of lectures, enabling faculty members to incorporate interactive tools, digital resources, animations, and simulations.

Online lectures from the E-Learning Studio enhance the learning experience, offering flexibility for students to review content at their own pace and engage in meaningful discussions during class. The use of Google Classroom and Google Quiz for assignments and quizzes streamlines assessment processes, fostering collaborative learning.

Furthermore, Our institute's proactive approach in guiding students towards online courses like NPTEL, SWAYAM, EDX, reflects a commitment to providing a well-rounded and contemporary education. In essence, the strategic integration of technology and innovative teaching methods positions of our institute at the forefront of educational excellence.
